Abstract

University of Calabria and University of Shkodra have been a good relationship from the beginning of '90 years. A strong point of this cooperation is a common Doctoral Studies in Albanology that has been finished successfully. In this context we hope to realize another project, a double degree in “Pedagogical Science for intercultural studies and media education”. This degree provides its graduates with necessary skills and competences in order to work in the of the social integration and intercultural relationships, and media education.

The MA-program addresses at qualified graduates and professionals in different fields. This Master focuses also on e deep acquisition of advanced knowledge in the field of media education and adequate knowledge and skills in the design, management and evaluation of activities and interventions of media education. The MA-program provides “e-learning” specific actions, through various kinds of electronic media and information and communication technologies (ITC) in education. The E-learning actions are provided with particular concern to forms of educational technology that support learning and teachingelectronically or technologically. The core courses are: Language and Linguistics (that includes issues such as multilingualism, contextual conditions for a second language acquisition, language as a cultural medium etc), Educational Sciences (it examines learning, development and socialization and compares educational concepts and teaching models), Media education (it deals with the acquisition of advanced knowledge of media education, technology education and communication), Media and migration, Studies in minorities (history, culture, religion), Knowledge Management, Human Resource Management etc.
