Abstract

It is easily understandable that a well compiled legislation has vital importance for the implementation of regulatory strategies, whether they belong to the private or public sector. Therefore, it becomes a necessary precondition of representing a country towards its citizens and third parties. Law infrastructure in Albania is being drafted and adapted in order to create a modern legal system in general, and in the field of commercial law, in particular. The process of European Integration in Albania has as one of its objectives, the right compilation of commercial law provisions, with the main reason to create a progressive liberalization of exchanges and the establishment of a free trade area between parties. The SAA itself signed between EU and Albania, provides the full harmonization of Albanian Legislation with « Acquis communautaire ». This paper aims to underline a general overview of the SSA impact in approaching the commercial legislation and Albanian practice with « acquis communautaire ». Albania, is committed to continue and encourage the cooperation and the good neighborhood relationship with other region countries, including an appropriate level of mutually concessions regarding free movement of persons, goods, capital and services, as well as the development of projects in common interests, especially those related to the criminal organization fight, corruption, money laundering, illegal immigration and trafficking including in particular that of human beings and illicit drugs. The approximation will be focused on the essential elements of internal market as well as in other important fields such as competition, intellectual property, industrial and commercial right, public procurement, standards and certification, financial services, nautical and terrestrial transport, paying a special attention to the environmental safety and standards, to the law of commercial companies, to the consumer protection, data protection, health and safety and equal opportunities. This commitment is an important factor for the development of cooperative relations and to the establishment of regional stability.
