

A DESCRIPTIVE APPROACH AND SOURCES OF ENGLISH AND ALBANIAN PHRASEOLOGICAL UNITS

Laura Furxhi

Nobel High School, Albania, E mail: shkolla.nobel@hotmail.com

Abstract

Today we live in a global world and many individuals are affected not only from the culture of a foreign language but even from the language of this place and we are disposed to believe that the most important thing is language, a symbol that gives us the individuality that omits every country borders and people feel themselves habitats of the whole world. In our short paper we would like to bring a small contribution as far as phraseological units are concerns, compared to those of English language, as a language spoken worldwide. The aim of this paper is to describe and compare the distinctive features of English and Albanian phraseological units and to highlight different sources. The method we will use is the descriptive approach. But before starting with this topic it is important to mention some short theoretical definitions of phraseological units and continuing with their special criteria and their sources. As a conclusion, we start with a theoretical abstract definition and conclude in a concrete, objective, concentrative idea, as a challenge of global development.

Keywords: phraseological units, descriptive approach, sources, criteria, English and Albanian language.