

THE SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS –SDG 2015-2030. A CHANCE FOR THE BALKAN AREA

Adriano Ciani<sup>1</sup>, Arlinda Beka<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup>Department of Agricultural, Environment and Food Science of Perugia University, Italy,
E mail: adriano.ciani@unipg.it

<sup>2</sup>Faculty of Education, University of Tirana, University of Prishtina, Kosovo,
E mail: arlinda.beka@uni-pr.edu

Abstract

The century 21 is strongly characterized as the era of sustainability. The great challenges that the United Nations has launched in 2000 under the name of Millennium Goals -MG were directed to groped to reverse the dramatic situations in several part of the world, have brought to the attention of the international level already with the report "Our Common Future " by the World Commission on Economy and Development-WCED in 1987 ( Brundtland Commission ). In this document was found, among other things, the need for the Planet to change by a quantitative model of development towards a defined qualitative and sustainable characterized by the intra-and inter-generational option and multi-criteria approach . The actions of the MG at the end of the program, that had been planned for the period 2000-2015, is coming to at the end. The United Nations are in the process of adopting a strengthening program for future development characterized by widespread prosperity, with the reduction of poverty, the right of access to education and to basic services, the limiting of the digital divide, strengthening the role of women and gender equality, ensuring food security, the aspiration to happiness of new generations with the full respect for the environment and a strong social equity. The paper intends to present the Sustainable Development Goals for 2015-2030 as already processed by SDSN -Sustainable Development Solution Network. From the analysis of the various goals and targets and indicators, is evident, that the process of adoption and the practical realization of such action is a chance indispensable throughout the Balkans. In this sense, the action of formation of deep and widespread of human capital will have a decisive role in to reach in the whole area a society that must improve in truly inclusive and sustainable. The creation of a Balkan Institute for Sustainable Development-BISD is the final proposal that can create real conditions for this great goal.

Keywords: sustainable development, education, human capital, information, institution building