Abstract

In the new conditions, created after the year 90', distribution of the most advanced world technology and creating the conditions for a massive opening to the world brought positive and negative consequences in the Albanian society in Albanian language. It is estimated as a positive the fact of appropriation of technology and the willingness of our youth to be worthy citizens of Europe. But this openness to the world has led to the weakening of the role of language and worse still in its understatement seeing it as the language of a poor country that does not offer anything benefit its speakers. The lack of self-assessment versus Europe has led to social problems among young Albanian teenagers and the whole society. In the new phase of the developing the science of linguistic historical research after 90s, even in the full re-evaluation of our cultural heritage under the light of new facts, in terms of opening to the world culture, our school textbooks continue to suffer the lack of a better comprehensive reflection of our mutual Europeans. They are still at the same level like many years ago, even worst, just a simple reflection and not at all interesting about adults and nevertheless for kids. At the same time the best experience comes from the outside of our country, the patriots or foreigners who see our language and traditions as one of the oldest and more estimated in Europe. With the opportunities that the time offers and the new developments, with the spaces in the curricula of school, it is more probable that children even in elementary levels become recognized with the ancient of Albanian language and the best traditions of our people, continuing with the enlarging of knowledge in the higher levels. If in Albanian schools and not only there, will be worked more convincingly to reflect Indo-European roots of the Albanian language and its relationship with European counterparts, each person will feel motivated to respect his language and country.
