

VERBS OF SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD IN SIMPLE AND COMPLEX SENTENCES

Agnesa Hasimja

University of Prishtina “Hasan Prishtina”, Faculty of Philology, Albanian Language Department, Kosovo. Email: agnesa.hasimja@uni-pr.edu

Abstract

Subjunctive mood, after indicative, is the most useful mood in Albanian language. Except the modality that it defines this mood, and that it makes it distinctive from indicative mood, they are distinguished also from the structure in those they are used within the sentence. Consequently also, object of this study is the presentation of the subjunctive mood verbs in simple sentences, complex, compound, main and subordinate clauses. In this paper, initially will be treated theoretically the subjunctive mood in Albanian. Then, verbs of this mood will be analyzed in the selected corpus from us, that are some different texts. After the analysis, will extract statistical data for their usage within the different sentences of Albanian. In the end, will be the presentation of the results.

Keywords: subjunctive mood, simple sentence, complex, main clause, subordinate clause